POLITICAL SCIENCE & PUBLIC POLICY NEW TITLES, JAN – MARCH 2024

Unpacking the G20

Insights from the Summit

Hugo Dobson, University of Sheffield, UK

'The definitive update on the evolution of the Group of Twenty (G20), this book identifies key global governance efforts to manage the contested world economy, climate change and sustainability, and global security. Cutting across the traditional boundaries of international politics and diplomacy, political economy, and area studies, and written in Hugo Dobson's trademark style of clarity and depth, it makes for a must read for scholars, students, policymakers, and thought leaders alike.'

The Policy Sciences of Harold Lasswell

Contextual Orientation and the Critical Dimension

Douglas Torgerson, Trent University, Canada

'Nobody is better placed than Douglas Torgerson to tease out and interpret Lasswell's foundational contribution to what today would be called critical policy studies. This book is a masterful treatment of its subject that should establish once and for all the importance of thinking with Lasswell and Torgerson about the policy sciences.'

Handbook on Transnationalism

Edited by Brenda S.A. Yeoh, National University of Singapore, Singapore and Francis L. Collins, Waipapa Taumata Rau, University of Auckland, Aotearoa New Zealand

'This Handbook provides an impressive overview of scholarship on transnationalism. Its chapters engage pressing questions about the geographies and temporalities of transnationalism across places, scales, life stages, and domains, from cities and higher education to religion and the family. Through its breadth and depth, this Handbook offers an important resource for migration scholars across disciplines.'

Migration and Nationalism

Theoretical and Empirical Perspectives

Edited by Michael Samers, University of Kentucky, US and Jens Rydgren, Stockholm University, Sweden

'We cannot separate immigration from nationalism. This book offers fresh insights into this understudied relationship. It helps us understand how populism, right-wing politics, and neoliberalism affect migration policies. To me it shows why the dream of free movement for all seems so distant today.'

Handbook of Meta-Research

Edited by Alis Oancea, University of Oxford, Gemma Derrick, University of Bristol, Nuzha Nuseibeh, Independent Researcher and Writer and Xin Xu, University of Oxford, UK

'This is a book populated by many of my favorite colleagues in the field of research on research. Here, they position key facets of our joint scholarly and real-world project of examining, and being part of, contemporary academia. The book is exemplary for doing multidisciplinary meta-research across the globe with professionalism and care. It provokes self-reflexivity because its authors are deeply engaged, rather than disinterested. The Handbook of Meta-Research is a book to cherish!'

How to Research Guides

Handbook of Indigenous Public Policy

Edited by Sheryl Lightfoot, University of British Columbia, Canada and Sarah Maddison, University of Melbourne, Australia

'The fields of public policy and public administration have not yet caught up with the challenge of embedded Indigenous peoples. As an antidote to this blind spot this Handbook is essential reading for administrators and policy academics alike. The many and diverse chapters of this book, from all over the world, demonstrating combined wisdom with many Indigenous contributions, mount a powerful argument for complacent governments, bureaucrats and academics to sit up and listen.'

Rethinking Development Politics

Ilan Kapoor, York University and Gavin Fridell, Saint Mary's University, Canada

'Ilan Kapoor and Gavin Fridell confront the invisible but active unconscious in development politics and they deliver not just a "rethinking" of issues but an "unthinking" development politics - as they critique modernization, Marxist political economy, postdevelopment and decoloniality. There is a refreshing take predicated on critical psychoanalysis, which explodes the seductive ideologies of development.'

Teaching Peace and Conflict Studies

Engaged Learning and Inclusive Theory

Susan F. Hirsch and Agnieszka Paczyńska,
George Mason University, US

'Making peace on the ground is challenging enough, however teaching how to make peace in the classroom is also challenging and requires different and certain mastery. Teaching Peace and Conflict Studies is a highly needed resource for everyone who plans to engage in peace education and conflict resolution not only at the university level but its lessons and recommendations on how to be an effective instructor/teacher are applicable to many other educational settings. The authors managed to tackle the core dilemmas that face instructors who always struggle to convey the complexity of peacemaking due to shifting context, ethical considerations, power dynamics, etc. The book offers guidelines and insightful frameworks on how to be an effective and ethical instructor of peace.'

Pandemic Recovery?

Reframing and Rescaling Societal Challenges

Edited by Lauren Andres, The Bartlett School of Planning, University College London, John R. Bryson, University of Birmingham, UK, Aksel Ersoy, Delft University of Technology, the Netherlands and Louise Reardon, University of Birmingham, UK

'A comprehensive survey of "recovery society" highlighting how Covid-19 amplified existing inequalities, as well as generating myriad improvisations and forms of resilience. Perhaps most importantly, it underlines how political efforts too often remain premised on the pre-pandemic status quo even as shock events – including those associated with catastrophic climate change – continue to challenge communities across the world.'

Handbook of Accounting and Public Governance

Exploring Hybridizations

Edited by Giuseppe Grossi, Kristianstad University, Nord University, Norway and Kozminski University, Poland and Jarmo Vakkuri, Tampere University, Finland and Norwegian School of Economics, Norway

'In the past decades, the number and types of hybrid organizations has increased strongly – and these organizations are here to stay! The hybridity of these organizations has had impact on all elements of public governance. Mixing efficiency driven modes with more attention for public value creation creates tensions for accountability, financial and other types of reporting, performance measurement and budgeting. This Handbook offers a welcome overview and discussion of these tensions, with examples from various countries, policy sectors, and government levels. It is a must read for scholars and students who are studying hybrid organizations.'

Bringing Bourdieu's Theory of Fields to Critical Policy Analysis

Edited by Vincent Dubois, Sciences Po, University of Strasbourg, France, researcher at SAGE (UMR CNRS 7363)

'At last, a book on policy analysis which tackles head on power and its unequal distribution between policymakers. The authors not only use Bourdieu's concept of the field to unpack power relations in a range of issue areas but also make significant contributions to Bourdieusien sociology and social theory.'

Why Meetings Matter

Everyday Arenas for Making, Performing and Maintaining Organisations

Patrik Hall, Malmö University and Malin Åkerström and Erika Andersson Cederholm, Lund University, Sweden

'An outstanding achievement by three prominent scholars of organisational practice. Organisations of all kinds have become prominent venues of definition and decision-making about who and what we were, are, or will be in life. Much of this transpires in meetings. The book superbly captures the significance of why meetings matter in this exceptionally broad landscape of social construction.'

Handbook on Subnational Governments and Governance

Edited by Claudia N. Avellaneda, Indiana University Bloomington and Ricardo A. Bello-Gómez, Rutgers University–Newark, US

'This new Handbook provides state-of-the-art analysis of subnational governance. A first-rate interdisciplinary team achieves truly global coverage, and this provides rare comparative insight in how democratic backsliding, fiscal pressures, rural-urban tensions, or minority nationalism shape subnational governance in the 21st century.'

Perceived Benefits versus Unintended Consequences, Second Edition

Imad A. Moosa, Ton Duc Thang University, Vietnam

Acclaim for the first edition:

'I know of no other work on the subject that collates and curates such a vast armamentarium of depressing, condemning data. Yes, to read this book is to be presented with example after astonishing example of situations that make the reader question, ultimately, how knowledge—which is, after all, what is at stake—manages to advance in the current academic environment.'

Achieving Equitable Education

Missing Education Data and the SDG 4 Data Regime

Edited by Marcos Delprato, University of Sussex, UK and Daniel D. Shephard, NORRAG, Geneva Graduate Institute and Indiana University Bloomington, US

'Whilst the SDG4 collects statistical data on a range of education issues, it has transformed the technical spaces of data production into venues of deliberation on future policy directions. However, what about what we do not know? This book's chapters chart in detail the challenges and repercussions of dealing with missing data, missing vulnerable populations, missing national relevance and, ultimately, missing the goal of using data meaningfully to support impactful education policies on the ground. Based on empirical evidence and analysis, and written by education experts working in the field, the book is recommended thoroughly to all those, experts and policymakers alike, that strive so that the SDG4 is not another missed opportunity in the governance of global education.'

Aristotle's Economics

Ethics and Exchange

David Reisman, University of Surrey, UK and Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

'With a unique and astute approach, David Reisman shows that Aristotle espoused a political economy which promoted a middle ground between free markets and government control. In doing so, he weaves together the many strands of Aristotle's thinking, explores his kinship to a variety of theories of political economy and offers lessons for contemporary economics.'

Political Creativity

Antonio Gramsci on Political Transformation

Sakari Hänninen, University of Jyväskylä and Finnish Institute for Health and Welfare (THL), Finland

'Sakari Hänninen's Political Creativity is an extraordinarily instructive textual encounter between Gramsci's writings – which he presents comprehensively and with nuanced attention to detail – and his own, a contrapuntal writing style that challenges traditional reading practices and solicits fresh insights into Gramsci's intellectual and political legacy. The book is an outstanding contribution not only to Gramsci studies but also to the craft of doing political theory.'

Legitimacy and Legitimation of Political Authorities

Credibility and Trust in Political Institutions

Andrea Lippi, University of Florence and Scuola Nazionale Dell'amministrazione, Italy

'Following Machiavelli (in critical times, go to the essential issues), Andrea Lippi revisits originally one of the key traditional concepts of politics (legitimacy) and the related process (legitimation). His theoretical analysis brings innovatively to the fore the multifaceted phenomenon and provides guidelines for empirical analysis.'

From Land Ownership to Landed Commons

Social Innovation in the Commoning of Scarce Land Resources

Edited by Frank Moulaert, Pieter Van den Broeck, KU Leuven, Belgium, Pavlos- arinos Delladetsimas, Harokopio University, Greece and Liana Simmons, Political Scientist, Food Activist, Italy

'This magisterial work will surely become a landmark in the scholarship of Landed Commons. It deftly synthesizes a vast literature while opening up fresh vistas of understanding, balancing general lessons with complicated details. The result is a rich, broad-spectrum portrait of Commons that includes a history of land ownership, contemporary case studies, and attention to the micro-social dynamics of commoning, as well as critical lessons (and limitations) of Ostrom's Commons research, anarchism, political ecology, and Marxism. Highly recommended!'

China's Health Silk Road

Vaccine Diplomacy and Health Governance

Gerald Chan, University of Auckland, New Zealand

'Chan has already produced path-breaking works on China's massive international project, the Belt and Road Initiative. This brilliant book follows on by showing China's assistance to world-wide health through such contributions as vaccines. Chan has added this splendid study of the all-important health silk road to economic, infrastructural and cultural silk roads.'

A World History of Political Thought, Second Edition

J. Babb, University of Tokyo, Japan

Acclaim for the first edition:

'This is an amazing book. It is a wide-ranging and often fairly detailed survey of political thought around the world that genuinely takes a global standpoint. It is not that the Western tradition is front and center and then occasionally other views enter; the author engages with the various traditions on their own terms and puts them side by side. There is no book out there that is remotely like this. The fields of political theory and political philosophy will benefit enormously from having this book available.'
